

Round 2- Deck The Flaws

Assigned Products:

You are hereby assigned with three absurd products out of which you can choose one to work with. Choose wisely!

Product 1- Sneakers That Bark With Each Step – Flip: “The shoe that announces your vibe.”

Product 2- Fridge That Yells "No!" When You Reach for Junk Food – Flip: “Your dietary conscience.”.”

Product 3- Wallet That Screams When Empty – Flip: “Financial honesty alert!”

Deck Requirements and Examples:

Slide	Content Area	What To Include
1.	Branding & Positioning Strategy	Brand name, tagline, target audience, how the flaw becomes the hero
2.	Cross-platform Marketing Campaign	Campaign name, choice of platforms (TV, social, digital, influencer, guerrilla, etc.), rationale
3.	Creative Storytelling	Concepts for ads (TV, Instagram reels, billboards, etc.), how they emotionally/comically sell the idea
4.	Absurd but Effective Solutions	Promotional tactics, influencer tie-ins, PR stunts, mock trials, etc.
5.	Execution Roadmap (Optional)	How they plan to roll this out in phases or markets if space allows.

Teams must create an entire marketing campaign that:

- Turns the flaw into a feature
- Uses multiple marketing platforms
- Persuades people that they NEED this product
- Is hilarious, creative, and over-the-top

The solution must be presented in a 3-5 slide PowerPoint (excluding introduction and thanking slides). Teams will present their pitch in 6-8 minutes, followed by a 5-minute Q&A, where judges will challenge their campaign.

Name your submission as:(leadername_teamname) and upload it on Unstop.

- Product Example:

- Invisible Sunglasses
- Bizarre Downside: They are so invisible, you will constantly lose them!
- Marketing Angle: "The Future of Eyewear—So Sleek, You Can't Even See Them!"
- TV Ad: A dramatic, high-fashion commercial where celebrities wear "nothing" but swear they see better than ever.
- Retail Gimmick: Every purchase comes with a "Find My Glasses" app that does absolutely nothing.
- Slogan: "If you lose them, it just means you're stylish enough to own them!"

Good Luck!
